Or do you want to add special effects so that the image looks more photogenic? To merge multiple images you select the individual layers in the Layers panel and drag them onto the canvas in Photoshop. Once all images have been added, you need to use a Filters and effects options to give the composite an overall look. lung, the most likely source is from discharge from the lung.^{[[R7],[R8]]} In our patient, the source of the infection was not known and suspicion was raised during surgical procedure. Anti-tuberculosis drugs therapy is not effective on viral pneumonia due to the characteristic of viral replication cycle, in particular negative-sense RNA-virus of coronavirus family. A Chinese study demonstrated that rt-RT-PCR for throat swab was positive but Gram staining, culture, and histopathology were all negative, which might be useful for early diagnosis of COVID-19 pneumonia. Our patient had a typical presentation of SARS-CoV-2 infection with fever, cough, and myalgia, but had a negative result for viral RNA on oropharyngeal swab. During her stay in hospital, her condition deteriorated rapidly, and the final diagnosis of COVID-19 was made by real-time RT-PCR of a throat swab sample. It was reported that the viral load in peripheral blood of patients might not correlate with the clinical severity.^{[[R9]]} The higher the viral load, the higher the level of CRP and the lower the lymphocytes counts.^{[[R10]]} So, it is important to monitor the clinical conditions of patients. Although chest CT can show the characteristic manifestations of COVID-19 pneumonia, it is not specific, usually showing a characteristic shadow called ground-glass opacity which is due to a variety of reasons. CT is sensitive to diagnose COVID-19 pneumonia from the initial stage and it can help doctors formulate treatment strategy. Our patient had a follow-up chest CT examination which showed no significant changes in the extent of lung damage, and no resolution of ground-glass opacity. The chest CT shows that bilateral GGO and other signs increased quickly. CT should not be performed to check the diagnosis, but to check the extent of lung injury, which would guide the treatment. The main therapeutic strategy for COVID-19 pneumonia is to kill the virus, and it includes host immunological activation to fight pathogens, promoting and optimizing immunity to remove the virus. Immunomodulatory treatment is an important method. Corticosteroids are effective at the early stage of viral infection due to their immunosuppressive effect on virus clearance, reduce pulmonary inflammation and limit tissue injury, which may inhibit the replication of viruses.
