Adobe Photoshop Lightroom: Lightroom is Adobe's standalone version of Photoshop. (We cover Lightroom in more detail in Chapter 6.) Adobe Illustrator: Illustrator is much more commonly used in print and web graphics than in traditional photo editing. Although it has a digital photography companion, Adobe Art Works, Adobe Illustrator is meant to be the graphic design program of choice for print and web graphics. Illustrator offers multiple ways to manipulate a layer, including the ability to change the blending mode, size, and color, as well as applying effects and drawing paths. Adobe InDesign: InDesign is a print and web layout program that comes with a companion program for digital photos. The companion program, Adobe PhotoShop Elements, is the beginning level of Photoshop. (We cover Elements in more detail in Chapter 4.) CorelDRAW: CorelDRAW is a program that has always been meant to be used for vector graphics, but the newest versions added a drawing tablet to help create raster images. This newer version is Adobe Illustrator's main rival. Photoshop.com: Photoshop's website contains both a growing library of how-to's as well as a community forum that is used to get help from the Photoshop community. GIMP: GIMP, or GNU Image Manipulation Program, is a powerful and free alternative to Photoshop. It is especially geared toward beginner to intermediate users who may find Photoshop overwhelming at first. SketchUp: SketchUp is a free 3D modeling program from Google. It is a well-rounded graphic design program that enables you to add many more features than Illustrator or Photoshop. Lightroom: Lightroom is Adobe's standalone version of Photoshop. (We cover Lightroom in more detail in Chapter 6.)

Married girlfriends Married girlfriends (hepa zugesanggar, bongkos, or bangkos) are Indonesian-Indonesian women who are in a relationship with a husband who they are familiar with, but has not informed his wife. As such, hepa zugesanggar ("married girlfriends") refers to the women who have affairs with their husband's friends, but are not necessarily meant as a jokingly derogatory term. Bangkos ("married girlfriends") is a slang term used by men in a relationship, usually with a married woman. Background Indonesian culture believes that having an affair with another man's wife is a taboo, especially in the family, to the extent where it can bring death to the family. Due to such ideologies, adultery within a family is not tolerated. As such, public affairs are commonly encouraged. However, such experiences are not available to all Indonesians and is specifically popularized within the high social status and elite, who are the main target market. Industry Initially, Indonesian popular culture engaged in a side effect of the adultery. After rising to fame from a soap opera, Aku Bukan Katolik (I'm Not a Catholic), Lale (a famous celebrity) had an affair with another famous celebrity, Diana who was previously married and was pregnant. This news caused public uproar, as the public believes that Lale was the father. Lale has since accepted the role as a father of both his child and Diana's child. Although there are controversies of Diana being in a relationship with Lale, it is still mentioned in public speeches and academic papers. Bangkos Bangkos (literally: "married girlfriends") are Indonesian men and women who are in a relationship with a married woman, but the husband or wife is unaware. The term is used in a negative connotation, and it is used as a slang word to describe a man who has an affair with a married woman, but can also be used to describe a man who is in a relationship with a married woman. Bangkos is used as a derogatory term when speaking about an immoral relationship, and specifically during a warning to others. The term is used by married Indonesian men to refer to their female friends whom they have secret relationships with, as well as being used to refer to young women in general. Bangkos is especially popular in urban Indonesia and especially amongst a majority of Indonesians who are aged 30 or older. The younger generation

Ulex europaeus lectin suppresses the virus particle-stimulated production of tumor necrosis factor-alpha and interleukin-6 in human monocytes. Lectins are carbohydrate-binding proteins that bind to carbohydrates present on the surface of living cells. Ulex europaeus lectin (UEA-1) is a plant lectin that is specific for the O-linked oligosaccharide structures of mucin glycoproteins. UEA-1 stimulates the production of various cytokines and growth factors from various cell types. It is widely accepted that lectins exert their biological effects via their interaction with specific carbohydrates present on the cell surface. The present study was performed to determine the effects of UEA-1 on the virus particle-stimulated production of cytokines in human monocytes. A virus particle suspension was prepared in endotoxin-free medium from a recombinant Semliki forest virus (SFV), which is a cytopathic RNA virus that induces an infectious disease similar to dengue fever. Human monocytes and macrophages were challenged with a subcytotoxic concentration of a virus particle suspension and then incubated with various concentrations of UEA-1. UEA-1 suppressed the virus particle-induced production of the proinflammatory cytokines tumor necrosis factor-alpha and interleukin-6 at both mRNA and protein levels.Oakland mayor wants to lower rent for senior housing Oakland Mayor Jean Quan said Monday that the city should lower its age discrimination rules for subsidized senior housing in hopes of bringing more apartments into the city's housing stock. "We have elderly people who are physically and mentally ready to move out but can't get out because of these discriminatory rules," said Quan, whose council district includes a number of subsidized senior housing complexes. "We have a shortage of housing here, and it would be a shame to make it harder to get seniors into housing." She pointed out that it is legally difficult for landlords to evict a senior living there, regardless of age. "We are turning into a society where our geriatric population is relegated to some place where they have no choice but to become couch potatoes because they are unable to move out of the house," Quan said. She is proposing a compromise that she said would allow landlords to voluntarily screen all applicants for subsidized housing. She said she wants more than 500 units in Oakland's senior housing complexes in return. Two councilmen are trying

In the Forgotten Stories: The Worlds of Ancient Greece series, I'm running a series of 5 hourish adventures centered on the Greek gods and heroes of Ancient Greece. The first 2 of the series are being held free to encourage new players and the earlier 3 of the series require only an active internet connection and a PC, but the later 3 require a significant amount of free time on your PC, a deep enough command of the Greek language, and access to a library. If you think you fit that description, then get in touch. If you like what
