With Share for Review, customers can bring other team members into Photoshop as collaborators, and immediately share documents, share editing data, and work together through direct collaboration. Using the Share for Review, user experience is seamless, and team members can share their work and actively collaborate on it with a simple click. When users open a Share for Review from Photoshop Express, they continue working in the application on their machine, but they are also immediately sent to Photoshop on the other person's machine for review. The feature also works well when two people share a fully-immersive canvas experience with a 360-degree web link in Photoshop or Elements. Share for Review – powered by Quip – can be activated via email or through the online sharing workflow tools. Share for Review enables customers to collaborate at the highest level across teams and devices with ease. With the new search features for photos in Photoshop, customers can search and quickly find photos in your photo library. This will be particularly useful to customers creating a project with large quantities of images. Currently, searching photos is a two-step process. First, customers need to set up an expression for a common object or pattern. Images found using that expression are then sorted by relevance. Finally, customers can manage collections of images to compare quickly by finding similar photos in a different collection.
